Create Dangerously
The Power and Responsibility of the Artist
ALBERT CAMUS
TRANSLATED BY SANDRA SMITH

“To create today means to create dangerously. Every publication is a deliberate act, and that act makes us vulnerable to the passions of a century that forgives nothing.”

In 1957, Nobel Prize-winning philosopher Albert Camus gave a speech entitled “Create Dangerously,” effectively a call to arms for artists, in particular those who came from an immigrant background, like he did. Camus understood the necessity of those making art as a part of civil society. A bold cry for artistic freedom and responsibility, his words today remain as timely as ever. In this new translation, Camus’s message, available as a stand-alone book for the first time, will inspire, and resonate with a new generation of writers.

Think, Write, Speak
Uncollected Essays, Reviews, Interviews, and Letters to the Editor
VLADIMIR NABOKOV
EDITED BY BRIAN BOYD AND ANASTASIA TOLSTOY

Think, Write, Speak follows up where Nabokov’s 1973 volume of selected prose Strong Opinions left off, presenting Nabokov’s public writings from a 1921 essay about Cambridge to two last interviews in 1977. The chronological order allows us to better understand Nabokov’s creative journey: from Cambridge student and fledgling poet to acclaimed Paris émigré novelist whose stature would bring him to teach and write in America, where his international success exploded with Lolita and propelled him back to Europe as a recognized literary master.

The Source of Self-Regard
Selected Essays, Speeches, and Meditations
TONI MORRISON

The Source of Self-Regard offers a rich gathering of Morrison’s essays, speeches, and meditations on society, culture, and art, spanning four decades. In the writings and speeches included here, Morrison takes on contested social issues, looks at enduring matters of culture, and provides piercing commentary on her own work, and that of other artists (Romare Bearden, Toni Cade Bambara, Peter Sellars among them).

“Morrison is more than the standard bearer of American literature. She is our greatest singer. And this book is perhaps her most important song.”
—The New York Times

“A piercing and visionary analyst of history, society, literature, language, and, always, race.” —The Boston Globe

The Measure of Our Lives
A Gathering of Wisdom
TONI MORRISON
FOREWORD BY ZADIE SMITH

Through bricolage—a construction or creation from a diverse range of available things—The Measure of Our Lives aims to evoke the totality of Toni Morrison’s literary vision and achievement. It dramatizes the life of her powerful mind by juxtaposing quotations, one to a page, drawn from her entire body of work, both fiction and nonfiction—from The Bluest Eye to God Help the Child, from Playing in the Dark to The Source of Self-Regard.

Serving as the ideal introduction to Toni Morrison, this brief book addresses issues of abiding interest in Morrison’s work, while simultaneously providing a treasury of quotations from a lifetime of literary contributions.

Figuring
MARIA POPOVA

Figuring explores the complexities of love and the human search for truth and meaning through the interconnected lives of several historical figures across four centuries—beginning with the astronomer Johannes Kepler and ending with the marine biologist and author Rachel Carson.

Stretching between these figures is a cast of artists, writers, and scientists—mostly women, mostly queer—whose public contribution have risen out of their unclassifiable and often heartbreaking private relationships to change the way we understand, experience, and appreciate the universe.

Furious Hours
Murder, Fraud, and the Last Trial of Harper Lee
CASEY CEP

Reverend Willie Maxwell was a rural preacher accused of murdering five family members for insurance money in the 1970s. Although the legal system allowed him to escape justice, a relative decided to take matters into his own hands, and shot Maxwell dead. Despite witnesses, Maxwell’s murderer was acquitted.

Sitting in the audience during the vigilante’s trial was Harper Lee, who spent a year in town reporting, and many more years working on her own version of the case. Furious Hours offers a deeply moving portrait of one of the country’s most beloved writers and her own venture into writing true-crime.

“Magical . . . the sort of story that even Lee would have been proud to write.”

This Is Shakespeare
EMMA SMITH

This electrifying new study investigates the challenges of the Bard’s inconsistencies and flaws, and focuses on revealing—not resolving—the ambiguities of the plays and their changing topicality. While covering all the plays in separate chapters, Smith writes in strikingly modern ways about individual agency, privacy, politics, celebrity, and sex.

“If I were asked to recommend one guide for Shakespeare’s plays, This Is Shakespeare would be it. . . . Richly rewarding.”
—James Shapiro, author of The Year of Lear: Shakespeare in 1606

“Brilliantly illuminating. . . . The best introduction to Shakespeare’s plays that I’ve read, perhaps the best book on Shakespeare, full stop.”
—Alex Preston, The Observer (London)

Possessed by Memory
The Inward Light of Criticism
HAROLD BLOOM

In Possessed by Memory, the great literary critic Harold Bloom departs from polemics to give us a moving, elegiac four-part spiritual autobiography: made up of brief, luminous readings of poetry, drama, and prose, all of which Bloom knew by heart.

“Spectacular. . . . You feel the pulse of life, what poetry can bring to us if we let it.”

Tragedy, the Greeks, and Us
SIMON CRITCHLEY

We might think we are through with the past, but the past isn’t through with us. Tragedy, the Greeks, and Us is a compelling examination of ancient Greek origins in the development and history of tragedy—a story that represents what we thought we knew about the poets, dramatists, and philosophers of ancient Greece—shown to us in an original light.

Proust’s Duchess
How Three Celebrated Women Captured the Imagination of Fin-de-Siècle Paris
CAROLINE WEBER
Finalist for the Pulitzer Prize

Three superstars of turn-of-the-century Parisian high society were immortalized in Marcel Proust’s In Search of Lost Time: Geneviève Halévy Bizet Straus; Laure de Sade, Comtesse Adhéaume de Chevigné; and Élisabeth de Riquet de Caraman-Chimay, Comtesse Greffulhe. All unhappily married, these women sought fulfillment by reinventing themselves as icons, and their fabled salons inspired generations of artists, composers, and writers. Caroline Weber takes us into these women’s lives, looking past the glamour to better understand the loneliness, rigid social rules, and arranged marriages that constricted them.

The Man in the Red Coat
JULIAN BARNES

Samuel Pozzi, a society doctor of Belle Époque Paris, was a pioneering surgeon, free-thinker, and man of science with a famously complicated private life who was the subject of one of John Singer Sargent’s greatest portraits.

In this vivid history, in which Barnes brings to life a tapestry of people (Henry James, Sarah Bernhardt, Oscar Wilde, Proust, James Whistler, among many others), we see not merely an epoch of glamour and pleasure, but, surprisingly, one of violence, prejudice, and nationalism. The Man in the Red Coat is, at once, a fresh portrait of the Belle Époque; an illuminating look at the longstanding exchange of ideas between Britain and France; and a life of a man whose ideas and achievements were far ahead of his time.

Parisian Lives
Robert Stone (1937–2015) lived a life rich in adventure, achievement, and inner turmoil. He grew up rough on the streets of New York, the son of a mentally troubled single mother. After his Navy service in the fifties, he studied writing at Stanford. The publication of his superb New Orleans novel, Hall of Mirrors (1967), initiated a succession of dark-humored novels that earned him favorable comparisons to Hemingway, Graham Greene, and Joseph Conrad. A close friend of Robert Stone, Madison Smartt Bell offers a deeply researched biography, as well as a sympathetic reading of his work that will secure Stone’s place in the pantheon of major American writers.

The Dairy Restaurant
BEN KATCHOR

In The Dairy Restaurant, Ben Katchor tells the history of where we choose to eat. In words and his inimitable drawings, he begins with Adam, entering Eden and eating the fruits therein. He examines ancient protocols for offerings to the gods and the kosher milk-meat taboo. He describes the first vegetarian practice, the development of inns offering food to travelers, the invention of the restaurant, the rise of various food fads, the intersection between culinary practice and radical politics, and an encyclopedic directory of dairy restaurants that once thrived in New York City. Ending on an elegiac note, he recollects his own experiences in many of these unique restaurants just before they disappeared.

“Ben Katchor sees into the life of everything he touches. The Dairy Restaurant is surely his capolavoro.”

The Jew of New York
BEN KATCHOR

In 1825, Mordecai Noah, a New York politician and amateur playwright possessed of a utopian vision, summoned all the lost tribes of Israel to an island near Buffalo in the hope of establishing a Jewish state. His failed plan, a mere footnote in Jewish-American history, is the starting point for Ben Katchor’s brilliantly imagined epic that unfolds on the streets of New York a few years later. Katchor brings together a medley of characters—a disgraced kosher slaughterer, an importer of religious articles and women’s hosiery, a latter-day Kabbalist, among others—united by a common goal to settle into the New World.

The Other Americans
LAILA LALAMI

The Other Americans is a timely novel about the suspicious death of a Moroccan immigrant, informed by the treacherous fault lines of American culture.

Late one spring night, Driss Guerraoui, a Moroccan immigrant living in California, is walking across a darkened intersection when he is killed by a speeding car. The repercussions of his death bring together a diverse cast of characters, all deeply divided by race, religion, and class. As they tell their stories, connections among them emerge, and love, messy and unpredictable, is born.

“The Other Americans confirms Laila-mi’s reputation as one of the country’s most sensitive interrogators, probing at the fault lines in family, and the wider world.” —Financial Times

Lost Children Archive
VALERIA LUISELLI

Lost Children Archive tells the story of a family whose road trip across America collides with an immigration crisis at the southwestern border.

In their car on a trip from New York to Arizona, the family plays games and sings along to music. But on the radio, there is news about an “immigration crisis”: thousands of kids trying to cross the southwestern border into the United States, but getting detained—or lost in the desert along the way. With urgency and empathy, Valeria Luiselli takes us deep into the lives of one remarkable family as it probes the nature of justice and equality today.

JENNY OFFILL

For years, Lizzie Benson has tended to her God-haunted mother and her recovering addict brother. At a time when they’re both stabilized, Lizzie receives an offer from her old mentor, Sylvia Liller. Sylvia has become famous for her prescient podcast, Hell and High Water, and wants to hire Lizzie to answer the mail she receives: from left-wingers worried about climate change and right wingers worried about the decline of western civilization. As Lizzie dives into this polarized world, she begins to wonder what it means to keep tending your own garden once you’ve seen the flames beyond its walls.

We Ride Upon Sticks
QUAN BARRY

In the coastal town of Danvers, MA, home of the original 1692 witch trials, the 1989 Danvers Falcons will do anything to make it to the state field hockey finals—even if it means tapping into some devilishly dark powers.

In chapters dense with ‘80s iconography—from Heathers to “big hair”—Quan Barry expertly weaves together the individual and collective journeys of this enchanted team as they storm their way to the championship. Helmed by good-girl captain Abby Putnam (a descendant of the infamous Salem accuser—Ann Putnam) and her co-captain Jen Fiorenza, whose bleached blond “Claw” sees and knows all, the DHS Falcons prove to be wily, original, and bold, flaunting society’s stale notions of femininity in order to find their glorious true selves through the crucible of team sport and, more importantly, friendship.

The place: AutoAmerica. The land: half under water. The Internet—the new face of government—is “Aunt Nettie”: a mix of artificial intelligence, surveillance technology, and pesky maxims. The people have been divided, and no one is happy. The angel-fair “Netted” still have jobs and literally occupy the high ground, while the mostly coppertoned “Surplus” live on swampland if they’re lucky, on the water if they’re not.

The story: To a Surplus couple is born a girl with a golden arm. At two, Gwen is hurling her stuffed animals from the crib; her teens find her playing baseball happily in an underground Surplus league. When AutoAmerica re-enters the Olympics—with a special eye on beating ChinRussia—Gwen attracts interest.

Interior Chinatown
CHARLES YU

Willis Wu doesn’t perceive himself as a protagonist even in his own life: he’s merely Generic Asian Man. Every day, he leaves his tiny room in a Chinatown SRO and enters the Golden Palace restaurant, where Black and White, a procedural cop show, is in perpetual production. He’s a bit player here, too . . . but he dreams of being Kung Fu Guy—the highest aspiration he can imagine for a Chinatown denizen.

Playful but heartfelt, a send-up of Hollywood tropes and Asian stereotypes, Interior Chinatown is Charles Yu’s deeply personal novel about race, pop culture, and escaping the roles we are forced to play.

The Illness Lesson
CLARE BEAMS

The year is 1871. In Ashwell, Massachusetts, at the farm of Samuel Hood and his daughter, Caroline, a mysterious flock of red birds descends. Samuel, whose fame as a philosopher has waned in recent years, takes the birds’ appearance as an omen that the time is ripe for his newest venture: a school for young women.

Not long after the school year begins, students start to manifest bizarre symptoms: rashes, fits, headaches, verbal tics, night wanderings. In desperation, the school turns to the ministering of a sinister physician—based on a real historic treatment—just as Caroline’s body, too, begins its betrayal. As the girls’ conditions worsens, long-buried secrets emerge, and Caroline must confront the all-male, all-knowing authorities around her, the ones who insist the voices of the sufferers are unreliable.

The Man Who Never Stopped Sleeping
AHARON APPELFELD
TRANSLATED BY JEFFREY M. GREEN

Erwin doesn’t remember much about his jour- ney across Europe when the war finally ended because he spent most of it asleep, carried by other survivors. As he struggles to stay awake, he becomes part of a group of boys being rigor- ously trained by an emissary from Palestine for life in their new home. The fog of sleep slowly begins to lift, and when Erwin and his fellow clandestine immigrants are released by British authorities from the detention camp in Atlit, he and his comrades are assigned to a kibbutz, where they learn how to tend to the land and speak their new language. But a part of Erwin desperately clings to memories of the past, and he knows that despite what he is be- ing told, who he was is just as important as who he is now becoming.

Good Citizens Need Not Fear
MARIA REVA

A bureaucratic glitch omits an entire building, along with its residents, from municipal records. So begins Reva’s ingeniously intertwined narratives: nine stories that span the chaotic years leading up to and immediately following the fall of the Soviet Union. But even as the denizens of 1933 Ivansk Street weather the neglect of the increasingly powerless authorities, they devise ingenious ways to survive. Good Citizens Need Not Fear tacks from moments of intense paranoia to surprising tenderness and back again, exploring what it is to be an individual amid the roiling forces of history.

The Cockroach
IAN McEWAN

Set in an uncanny alternative 1982 London—where Britain has lost the Falklands War, Margaret Thatcher battles Tony Benn for power, and Alan Turing achieves a breakthrough in artificial intelligence—Machines Like Me powerfully portrays two lovers who will be tested beyond their understanding. Charlie, drifting through life and dodging full-time employment, is in love with Miranda, a bright student who lives with a terrible secret. When Charlie comes into money, he buys Adam, one of the first generation of synthetic humans. With Miranda’s assistance, he codesigns Adam’s personality. The near-perfect human that emerges is beautiful, strong, and smart—and a love triangle soon forms.

“Witty and humane . . . a cautionary fable about artificial intelligence, consent, and justice.” —The New Yorker

“The Cockroach is Kafka’s Metamorphosis in the era of Brexit. Centered on a cockroach transformed into the prime minister of England, Ian McEwan’s satirical novel takes our recognizable political world and turns it on its head: Jim Sams has undergone a metamorphosis. Machines Like Me
IAN McEWAN

Set in an uncanny alternative 1982 London—where Britain has lost the Falklands War, Margaret Thatcher battles Tony Benn for power, and Alan Turing achieves a breakthrough in artificial intelligence—Machines Like Me powerfully portrays two lovers who will be tested beyond their understanding. Charlie, drifting through life and dodging full-time employment, is in love with Miranda, a bright student who lives with a terrible secret. When Charlie comes into money, he buys Adam, one of the first generation of synthetic humans. With Miranda’s assistance, he codesigns Adam’s personality. The near-perfect human that emerges is beautiful, strong, and smart—and a love triangle soon forms.

Zed
JOANNA KAVENNA

When a corporation manages to create the perfect algorithm for a perfect world, the question remains: now what to do with all these imperfect people?

Dazzlingly original and darkly comic, Zed asks profound questions about who we are, what we owe to one another, and what makes us human. It describes our moment—the ugliness and the beauty—perfectly.

“Reminiscent of Dave Egger’s The Circle. . . . Zed sweats with wit and vitality.”

The Cockroach
IAN McEWAN

The Cockroach is Kafka’s Metamorphosis in the era of Brexit. Centered on a cockroach transformed into the prime minister of England, Ian McEwan’s satirical novel takes our recognizable political world and turns it on its head: Jim Sams has undergone a metamorphosis. In his new incarnation he is the most powerful man in Britain. Nothing must get in his way; not the opposition, nor the dissenters within his own party. Not even the rules of parliamentary democracy.

The Dragonfly Sea

YVONNE ADHIAMBO OWUOR

The Dragonfly Sea is a transcendent story of adventure, fraught choices, and of the inexorable need for shelter in a dangerous world. On the island of Pate, off the coast of Kenya, lives solitary, stubborn Ayaana and her mother, Munira. When a sailor named Muhidin, also an outsider, enters their lives, Ayaana finds something she has never had before: a father. But as Ayaana grows into adulthood, forces of nature and history begin to reshape her life and the island itself. Ayaana ends up embarking on a dramatic ship’s journey to the Far East, where she will discover friends and enemies; be seduced by the charming but unreliable scion of a powerful Turkish business family; reclaim her devotion to the sea; and come to find her own tenuous place amid a landscape of beauty and violence and surprising joy.

“A paean to both cultural diffusion and difference.”

Tyll
DANIEL KEHLMANN
TRANSLATED BY ROSS BENJAMIN

Through Tyll, Daniel Kehlmann confirms the power of art in the face of the senseless brutality of history. His account of the seventeenth-century vagabond performer and trickster Tyll Ulenspiegel begins when he’s a scrawny boy growing up in a quiet village. When his father, a miller with a secret interest in alchemy and magic, is found out by the church, Tyll is forced to flee with the baker’s daughter, Nele. They find safety and companionship with a traveling performer, who teaches Tyll his trade. And so begins a journey of discovery and performance for Tyll, as he travels through a continent devastated by the Thirty Years’ War and encounters along the way a hangman, a fraudulent Jesuit scholar, and the exiled King Frederick and Queen Elizabeth of Bohemia.

The Convert
STEFAN HERTMANS
TRANSLATED BY DAVID MCKAY

In eleventh-century France, Vigdis Adelaïs, a young woman from a prosperous Christian family, falls in love with David Todros, a rabbi’s son and yeshiva student. To be together, the couple must flee their city, and Vigdis must renounce her life of privilege and comfort. Pursued by her father’s knights and in constant danger of betrayal, the lovers embark on a dangerous journey to the south of France, only to find their brief happiness destroyed by the vicious wave of anti-Semitism sweeping through Europe with the onset of the First Crusade.

What begins as a story of forbidden love evolves into a globe-trotting trek spanning continents, as Vigdis undertakes an epic journey to Cairo and back, enduring the unimaginable in hopes of finding her lost children.

The Plotters
UN-SU KIM
TRANSLATED BY SORA KIM-RUSSELL

In this fantastical crime novel set in an alternate Seoul, assassination guilds compete for market domination. Behind every assassination, there is an anonymous mastermind—a plotter—working in the shadows. Plotters quietly dictate the moves of the city’s most dangerous criminals, but their existence is little more than legend. Just who are the plotters? And more important, what do they want? The Plotters is a deeply entertaining thriller that soars with the soul, wit, and lyricism of real literary craft.

The April 3rd Incident
YU HUA
TRANSLATED BY ALLAN H. BARR

In the late 1980s and early 1990s—before his celebrated novel To Live catapulted him to international fame—Yu Hua, along with other young Chinese writers, departed from conventional realism in favor of a surreal, boundary-pushing approach that reflected the zeitgeist of their rapidly changing nation and also showed the influence of Western icons such as Kafka and Borges. Now available in English for the first time, these early stories find Yu Hua masterfully guiding us from one fractured reality to another.

The Banished Immortal
A Life of Li Bai (Li Po)
HA JIN

Li Bai’s brilliant poems—shaped by Daoist thought, filled with an irrepressible lust for life—were never given their proper due. Nonetheless, his lines rang out on the lips of tavern singers, soldiers, and writers throughout the Tang dynasty, and his deep desire for a higher, more perfect world gave rise to his nickname: the Banished Immortal. Today, Bai’s verses remain an inextricable part of the Chinese language, and are famed throughout the world. The Banished Immortal is an extraordinary portrait of a poet who both transcended his time and was shaped by it, producing some of the world’s most enduring verses.

My Brother’s Husband, Volumes 1 & 2
GENGOROH TAGAME
TRANSLATED BY ANNE ISHII

Yaichi is a work-at-home suburban dad in contemporary Tokyo; formerly married to Natsuki, and father to their young daughter, Kana. Their lives suddenly change with the arrival at their doorstep of a hulking, affable Canadian named Mike Flanagan, who declares himself to be the widower of Yaichi’s estranged gay twin, Ryoji. Mike is on a quest to explore Ryoji’s past, and the family reluctantly but dutifully takes him in. What follows is an unprecedented and heartbreaking look at the state of a largely still-closeted Japanese gay culture: how it’s been affected by the West, and how the next generation can change the preconceptions about it and prejudices against it.

“Achingly true. . . . The story of a man coming to terms with the unquestioned cultural assumptions he’s harbored all his life.” — NPR
Horizon
BARRY LOPEZ

From the National Book Award-winning author of the classic Arctic Dreams comes a vivid, poetic, capacious work that recollects the travels around the world and the encounters—human, animal, and natural—that have shaped an extraordinary life. Horizon moves indelibly, immersively, through the author’s travels to six regions of the world: from Western Oregon to the High Arctic; from the Galápagos to the Kenyan desert; from Botany Bay in Australia to finally, unforgettably, the ice shelves of Antarctica. Along the way, Lopez probes the long history of humanity’s thirst for exploration, searching for meaning and purpose in a broken world.

Black Is the Body
Stories from My Grandmother’s Time, My Mother’s Time, and Mine
EMILY BERNARD

Black Is the Body goes beyond a narrative of black innocence and white guilt and sets out to discover a new way of telling the truth as the author has lived it. In these twelve deeply personal, connected essays, Emily Bernard details the experience of growing up black in the south with a family name inherited from a white man, surviving a random stabbing at a New Haven coffee shop while taking graduate studies at Yale, marrying a white man from the north and bringing him home to her family, adopting two babies from Ethiopia, and living and teaching in a primarily white New England college town.

“These [twelve] formidable, destined-to-be-studied essays mark the emergence of an extraordinary voice on race in America.” —O, The Oprah Magazine

Notes from a Young Black Chef
KWAME ONWUACHI

By the time he was twenty-seven years old, Kwame Onwuachi had opened—and closed—one of the most talked about restaurants in America. He had launched his own catering company with twenty thousand dollars that he made from selling candy on the New York City subway, yet he’d been told he would never make it on television because his cooking wasn’t “Southern” enough. In this inspiring memoir about the intersection of race, fame, and food, he shares the remarkable story of his culinary coming-of-age.

“An astonishing and open-hearted story. . . . [Chef Kwame] is a phoenix, rising into better and better things and showing us all what it means to be humble, hungry, and daring.”

I Lost My Girlish Laughter

JANE ALLEN

A lost literary gem of Hollywood in the 1930s, I Lost My Girlish Laughter is a thinly veiled send-up of the actors, producers, and directors of the Golden Age of the studio system.

Madge Lawrence, fresh from New York City, lands a job as the personal secretary to the powerful Hollywood producer Sidney Brand (based on the legendary David O. Selznick). In a series of letters home, Western Union telegrams, office memos, Hollywood gossip newspaper items, and personal journal entries, we get served up the inside scoop on all the shenanigans, romances, backroom deals, and betrayals that go into making a movie.

“A must-read for any fan of classic Hollywood... The way the story is told... makes you feel as if you’ve been given a sneak peek into a secret world.”

—Alicia Malone, host of Turner Classic Movies

What Makes Sammy Run?

BUDD SCHULBERG

This classic novel shaped two generations’ view of the movie business and introduced the archetypal Hollywood player Sammy Glick. He’s got a machete mouth and a genius for double-cross. As Budd Shulberg—author of the screenplay On the Waterfront—follows Sammy’s relentless upward progress, he creates a virtuoso study in character that manages to be hilariously appalling yet deeply compassionate.

“Sammy Glick remains at the top of the Hollywood sleaze heap, a hustler nonpareil... What Makes Sammy Run? is still the quintessential novel about ‘the all-American heel.’”

—Mordecai Richler, GQ
Sleeping with Strangers
How the Movies Shaped Desire
DAVID THOMSON

In this wholly original work of film criticism, David Thomson probes the many ways in which sexuality has shaped the movies—and the ways in which the movies have shaped sexuality. Exploring the tangled notions of masculinity, femininity, beauty, and sex that characterize our cinematic imagination—and drawing on examples that range from advertising to pornography, Bonnie and Clyde to Call Me by Your Name—Thomson illuminates how film as art, entertainment, and business has historically been a polite cover for a kind of erotic séance. In so doing, he casts the art and the artists we love in a new light.

“More original insights . . . and thought-inducing speculations than several volumes of a less talented writer’s efforts . . . . An unaccountable and irresistible book.”

—The New York Times Book Review

The Movie Musical!
JEANINE BASINGER

In The Movie Musical!, leading film historian Jeanine Basinger reveals, with her trademark wit and zest, the whole story of the Hollywood musical. From Fred Astaire, whom she adores, to La La Land, which she deprecates, Basinger examines a dazzling array of stars, strategies, talents, and innovations in the history of musical cinema. Whether analyzing a classic Gene Kelly routine, relishing a Nelson-Jeanette operetta, or touting a dynamic hip-hop number (in the underrated Idlewild), she is a canny and charismatic guide to the many ways that song and dance have been seen—and heard—on film.

Stranger by Night

Poems

EDWARD HIRSCH

Beginning with “My Friends Don’t Get Buried,” the lament of a delinquent mourner as his friends have begun to die, and ending with the plaintive note to self “don’t write elegies anymore,” Edward Hirsch takes us backward through the decades in these memory poems of startling immediacy. He recalls the black dress a lover wore when he couldn’t yet know the tragedy of her burning spirit; the radiance of an autumn day in Detroit when his students smoked outside, passionately discussing Shelley; the day he got off late from a railyard shift and missed an antiwar demonstration. As the poet ages and begins to lose his peripheral vision, the world is “stranger by night,” but these elegant, heart-stirring poems shed light on a lifetime that contains both sorrow and joy.

Broadway for Paul

Poems

VINCENT KATZ

Broadway, both off the grid and definitive of Manhattan as it cuts its way downtown, is a metaphor for Katz’s path through these poems: from Lincoln Plaza on the Upper West Side to the African Burial Ground and the courthouses downtown, Katz mines his native city for the deep humanity that undergirds its streets. His title, with its implication that one could give something as large and undefinable as Broadway to a single person, courts an impossibility that generates the possibility of friendship, as well as the largesse Katz wants to find in our civic discourse.

Divided into “Home Recordings” and “Field Recordings,” Brown speaks to the way personal experience is shaped by culture, while culture is forever affected by the personal, recalling a black Kansas boyhood to comment on our times. These thirty-two taut poems and poetic sequences remind us that blackness and brownness tell an ongoing story.

“Necessary... Young’s book releases a universal shout... while remaining at the same time deeply and lovingly personal.” —The New York Times Book Review

Working
ROBERT A. CARO

Working offers a collection of evocatively written, personal pieces by one of America’s most lauded biographers. Robert Caro gives a glimpse into his own life and work, recalling the moments at which he came to understand that he wanted to write not just about the men who wielded power but about the people and the politics that were shaped by that power. He talks about the importance of the writing itself: how he tries to infuse it with a sense of place and mood to bring characters and situations to life on the page. Taken together, these reminiscences bring into focus the passion, the wry self-deprecation, and the integrity with which this brilliant historian has always approached his work.

“Iridescent . . . [Caro has] measurably enriched our lives with his intellectual rigor, his compassion, his openness, his wit and grace.”

The Lost Art of Scripture
Rescuing the Sacred Texts
KAREN ARMSTRONG

In this timely book, one of the most trusted writers on the world of faith examines the meaning of Scripture. The sacred texts have been coopted by fundamentalists, and by others who interpret Scripture to bolster their own prejudices. The Lost Art of Scripture shines fresh light on the world’s major religions to rediscover a creative and spiritual engagement with holy texts.

“Armstrong is the most articulate and generous-hearted exegete of religion writing in English at the present time.”
