The Water Dancer
Ta-Nehisi Coates

Young Hiram Walker was born into bondage. When his mother was sold away, Hiram was robbed of all memory of her—but was gifted with a mysterious power that could be the key to both his freedom and that of his loved ones. So begins an unexpected journey that takes Hiram from the coffin of the deep South to dangerously utopic movements in the North. Even as he’s enlisted in the underground war between slavers and the enslaved, Hiram’s resolve to rescue the family he left behind endures.

“The most surprising thing about The Water Dancer may be its unambiguous narrative ambition. . . . The Water Dancer is a jeroboam of a book, a crowd-pleasing exercise in breakneck and often occult storytelling that tonally resembles the work of Stephen King as much as it does the work of Toni Morrison, Colson Whitehead and the touchstone African-American science-fiction writer Octavia Butler. . . . It is flecked with forms of wonder-working that push at the boundaries of what we still seem to be calling magical realism.”—Dwight Garner, The New York Times

Sabrina & Corina
Kali Fajardo-Anstine

Kali Fajardo-Anstine’s magnetic story collection breathes life into her Latina characters of indigenous ancestry and the land they inhabit in the American West. Against the remarkable backdrop of Denver, Colorado—a place that is as fierce as it is exquisite—these women navigate the land the way they navigate their lives: with caution, grace, and quiet force. Sabrina & Corina is a moving narrative of unrelenting feminine power and an exploration of the universal experiences of abandonment, heritage, and an eternal sense of home.

“Here are stories that blaze like wildfires, with characters who made me laugh and broke my heart, believable in everything they said and did. How tragic that American letters hasn’t met these women of the West before, women who were here before America was America. And how tragic that these working-class women haven’t seen themselves in the pages of American lit before. Thank you for honoring their lives, Kali. I welcome them and you.”—Sandra Cisneros
Where the Dead Sit Talking
Brandon Hobson

Set in rural Oklahoma during the late 1980s, Where the Dead Sit Talking is a stunning and lyrical Native American coming-of-age story.

With his single mother in jail, Sequoyah, a fifteen-year-old Cherokee boy, is placed in foster care with the Troutt family. Literally and figuratively scarred by his mother’s years of substance abuse, Sequoyah keeps mostly to himself, living with his emotions pressed deep below the surface. At least until he meets seventeen-year-old Rosemary, a troubled artist who also lives with the family.

Sequoyah and Rosemary bond over their shared Native American background and tumultuous paths through the foster care system, but as Sequoyah’s feelings toward Rosemary deepen, the precariousness of their lives and the scars of their pasts threaten to undo them both.

Inland
Téa Obreht

In the lawless, drought-ridden lands of the Arizona Territory in 1893, two extraordinary lives collide. Nora is an unflinching frontierswoman awaiting the return of the men in her life—her husband, who has gone in search of water for the parched household, and her elder sons, who have vanished after an explosive argument. Nora is biding her time with her youngest son, who is convinced that a mysterious beast is stalking the land around their home.

Lurie is a former outlaw and a man haunted by ghosts, who is in the midst of a momentous expedition across the West. The way in which Nora’s and Lurie’s stories intertwine is the surprise and suspense of this brilliant novel.

“With Inland, Obreht makes a renewed case for the sustained, international appeal of the American West, based on a set of myths that have been continually shaped and refracted through outside lenses… Discovering the particular genre conventions that Obreht has chosen to transfigure or to uphold soon becomes central to the novel’s propulsive appeal.”—The New Yorker

We Cast a Shadow
Maurice Carlos Ruffin

“You can be beautiful, even more beautiful than before.” This is the seductive promise of Dr. Nzinga’s clinic, where anyone can get their lips thinned, their skin bleached, and their nose narrowed. A complete demelanization will liberate you from the confines of being born in a black body—if you can afford it.

In this near-future Southern city plagued by fenced-in ghettos and police violence, more and more residents are turning to this experimental medical procedure. Like any father, our narrator just wants the best for his son, Nigel, a biracial boy whose black birthmark is getting bigger by the day. The darker Nigel becomes, the more frightened his father feels. But how far will he go to protect his son? And will he destroy his family in the process?

“Stunning and audacious . . . at once a pitch-black comedy, a chilling horror story and an endlessly perceptive novel about the possible future of race in America. . . . He writes with a straight face, never in love with his own cleverness—there are echoes of Ralph Ellison’s intelligent, unshowy prose.”—NPR

On Earth We’re Briefly Gorgeous
Ocean Vuong

On Earth We’re Briefly Gorgeous is a letter from a son to a mother who cannot read. Written when the speaker, Little Dog, is in his late twenties, the letter unearths a family’s history that began before he was born—a history whose epicenter is rooted in Vietnam—and serves as a doorway into parts of his life his mother has never known. At once a witness to the fraught love between a single mother and her son, it is also a brutally honest exploration of race, class, and masculinity.

“[Vuong] has produced a lyrical work of self-discovery that’s shockingly intimate and insistently universal . . . . Vuong ties the private terrors of supposedly inconsequential people to the larger forces pulsing through America . . . . At times, the tension between Little Dog’s passion and his concern seems to explode the very structure of traditional narrative, and the pages break apart into the lines of an evocative prose poem — not so much briefly gorgeous as permanently stunning.”—Ron Charles, Washington Post

The Vanishing Half
Brit Bennett

From the author of The Mothers comes a stunning new novel about twin sisters, inseparable as children, who ultimately choose to live in two very different worlds. One lives with her black daughter in the same southern town of her youth. The other passes for white, and her white husband knows nothing of her past. Still, even separated by so many miles and just as many lies, the fates of the twins remain intertwined. What will happen to the next generation, when their own daughters’ lives intersect?

Ernest Hemingway: The Sun Also Rises & Other Writings 1918-1926
In Our Time / The Torrents of Spring / The Sun Also Rises / journalism & letters
Ernest Hemingway; Edited by Robert Trogdon
With a letter of introduction from Sherwood Anderson, Ernest Hemingway and his first wife, Hadley, travelled to Paris in 1921. There, the young Hemingway came into contact with Gertrude Stein, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Pablo Picasso, James Joyce, and other expatriate writers and artists integral to his rapid development as a writer. This volume brings together work from the extraordinary period of 1918 to 1926, in which Hemingway’s famous prose style became fully formed.

Minor Feelings
An Asian American Reckoning
Cathy Park Hong
As the daughter of Korean immigrants, poet and essayist Cathy Park Hong grew up steeped in shame, suspicion, and melancholy. She would later understand that these “minor feelings” occur when you believe the lies you’re told about your own racial identity. With sly humor and a poet’s searching mind, Hong uses her own story as a portal into a deeper examination of racial consciousness in America today.
“To read this book is to become more human.”—Claudia Rankine, author of Citizen

Good Talk
A Memoir in Conversations
Mira Jacob
A bold, wry, and intimate graphic memoir about American identity, interracial families, and the realities that divide us.
“Good Talk illuminates the increasingly fractured world we live in. By turns hilarious and heart-rending, it plunges fearlessly into the murky gray areas of race and family, of struggling to find common ground, of trying to talk to our children and help them make sense of it all.”—Celeste Ng, author of Little Fires Everywhere

Black Leopard, Red Wolf
Marlon James
In the first novel of his Dark Star trilogy, Marlon James brings together myth, fantasy, and history to explore what happens when a mercenary is hired to find a missing child. Drawing from African history and mythology and his own rich imagination, James has written a novel unlike anything that’s come before it.
“James has spun an African fantasy as vibrant, complex and haunting as any Western mythology, and nobody who survives reading this book will ever forget it.”—Washington Post
The Book of Longings
Sue Monk Kidd

Sue Monk Kidd takes an audacious approach to history to imagine the story of a young woman named Ana. Raised in a wealthy family with ties to the ruler of Galilee, she is rebellious and ambitious, with a brilliant mind and a daring spirit. She engages in furtive scholarly pursuits and writes narratives about neglected and silenced women. Ana is expected to marry an older widower, a prospect that horrifies her. An encounter with 18-year-old Jesus changes everything.

The Ordering of Love
The New and Collected Poems of Madeleine L’Engle
Madeleine L’Engle; Foreword by Sarah Arthur

Madeleine L’Engle’s writing has always translated the invisible, quiet corners of our hearts into vivid language. In her poetry, L’Engle traverses the full breadth of the soul, intimately exploring its contours. “It is written out of pain, joy, and experience too great to be borne until it is ordered into words,” she says of her poetry. “And then it is written to be shared.” Open-hearted and vulnerable, The Ordering of Love is a meditation on beauty, loss, faith, and devotion.

Under the Rainbow
Celia Laskey

“Celia Laskey’s Under the Rainbow is a timely look into what it means to be queer in spaces that aggressively refuse you. Smart and compulsively readable, Laskey has woven together narratives that seek to embrace each other through the hurt. There is love and loss alike sandwiched in its pages; pain and pleasure. Laskey is a talented, sharp writer and her debut novel has its fingers on the pulse of the human condition.”—Kristen Arnett, author of Mostly Dead Things

Romance in Marseille
Claude McKay; Edited by Gary Edward Holcomb and William J. Maxwell

Buried in the archive for almost 90 years, Claude McKay’s Romance in Marseille traces the adventures of a rowdy troupe of dockworkers, prostitutes, and political organizers—straight and queer, disabled and able-bodied, African, European, Caribbean, and American. This first-ever edition includes an introduction by McKay scholars Gary Edward Holcomb and William J. Maxwell that places the novel within both the “stowaway era” of black cultural politics and McKay’s career as star and skeptic of the Harlem Renaissance.

Recollections of My Nonexistence
A Memoir
Rebecca Solnit
In Recollections of My Nonexistence, Rebecca Solnit describes her formation as a writer and as a feminist in 1980s San Francisco, in an atmosphere of gender violence on the street and throughout society and the exclusion of women from cultural arenas. Beyond being a memoir, Solnit’s book is also a passionate argument: that women are not just impacted by personal experience, but by membership in a society where violence against women pervades.

The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas Illustrated
Gertrude Stein; Illustrated by Maira Kalman
In this edition, artist Maira Kalman brings this glittering Parisian world to life, and celebrates Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas in vivid color. Her whimsical and inimitable illustrations complement the wit and humor of Stein’s narrative, and elevate the exciting intrigues of these famous women and their friends. Inviting readers to experience this book in a completely new way, the illustrated edition of The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas will prompt a contemporary reading of this cherished and singular classic.

Fairest
A Memoir
Meredith Talusan
Fairest is a memoir about a boy with albinism, a “sun child” from a rural Philippine village, who would become a woman. A scholarship to Harvard provided access to elite circles but required Meredith Talusan to navigate the complex spheres of race, class, sexuality, and her place within the gay community. Talusan shares poignant and powerful episodes of desirability and love that will remind readers of works such as Call Me By Your Name and Giovanni’s Room.

Real Life
Brandon Taylor
Almost everything about Wallace is at odds with the Midwestern university town where he is working uneasily toward a biochem degree. An introverted, black, queer young man from Alabama, he has left behind his family and enforced a wary distance even within his circle of friends. But over the course of a late-summer weekend, a series of confrontations with colleagues and an unexpected encounter with an ostensibly straight, white classmate conspire to fracture his defenses while exposing long-hidden currents of hostility and desire.
Trick Mirror
Reflections on Self-Delusion
Jia Tolentino
Over the course of nine essays, New Yorker staff writer and cultural critic Jia Tolentino pulls back the curtain on present day society—asking hard questions and refusing easy answers about the deeply entrenched institutions that largely determine who we are and what we think we want.

“[A] brilliant voice in cultural criticism. . . . She remains engaged with her subjects even as she scratches her head and wonders why we do what we do.”—The Washington Post

John Updike: Novels 1968-1975
Couples / Rabbit Redux / A Month of Sundays
John Updike
Here for the first time in one volume are three of John Updike’s most essential novels—the scandalous Couples, the brilliant Rabbit Redux, and the uproarious A Month of Sundays—which together form an unforgettable triptych of the social turbulence that roiled America from the Kennedy to the Nixon years. As a special feature the volume also presents two short pieces that shed light on the novels and the tale “Couples: A Short Story,” the origin of the novel of the same name, written in 1963 but deemed unsuitable for publication by The New Yorker.

Stories
Lidia Yuknavitch

The landscape of Verge is peopled with characters who are innocent and imperfect, wise and endangered. Lidia Yuknavitch challenges us with moments of uncomfortable truth, even as she urges us to place our faith not in the flimsy guardrails of society but in the memories held—and told—by our own individual bodies.

“Children harvest organs, janitors build magical worlds, and mourning lovers drive to destinations unknown in this searing, precise collection of short stories.”—Vogue

Drifts
Kate Zambreno

Drifts is an intimate portrait of creative obsession. At work on a novel that is overdue, the narrator grows obsessed with the challenge of writing the present tense. Entranced by the work of Rainer Maria Rilke, Albrecht Dürer, Chantal Akerman, and others, she records her thoughts in a yellow notebook that soon subsumes her work on the novel. A story of artistic ambition, personal crisis, and the possibilities and failures of literature, Drifts is the work of an exhilarating and vital writer.

How Much of These Hills Is Gold
C Pam Zhang

Lucy and Sam, newly orphaned children of immigrants, are suddenly alone in a hostile land. Fleeing the threats of their western mining town, they set off on a journey to bury their father. Blending Chinese symbolism and re-imagined history with fiercely original storytelling, How Much of These Hills Is Gold explores race in an expanding country and the question of where immigrants are allowed to belong, as well as the memories that bind and divide families and the yearning for home.

The Spirit of Science Fiction
Roberto Bolaño; Translated by Natasha Wimmer
Two young poets, Jan and Remo, find themselves adrift in Mexico City. Obsessed with poetry, and, above all, with science fiction, they are eager to forge a life in the literary world—or sacrifice themselves to it. But as close as these friends are, the city tugs them in opposite directions. Jan withdraws from the world, shutting himself in their shared rooftop apartment where he feverishly composes fan letters to the stars of science fiction and dreams of cosmonauts and Nazis. Meanwhile, Remo runs headfirst into the future, spending his days and nights with a circle of wild young writers, seeking pleasure in the city’s labyrinthine streets, rundown cafés, and murky bathhouses.

This kaleidoscopic work of strange and tender beauty is a fitting introduction for readers uninitiated into the thrills of Roberto Bolaño’s fiction, and an indispensable addition to an ecstatic and transgressive body of work.

The Girl with the Louding Voice
Abi Daré
Adunni is a 14-year-old Nigerian girl who knows what she wants: an education. This, her mother has told her, is the only way to get a “louding voice”—the ability to speak for herself and decide her own future. But instead, Adunni’s father sells her to be the third wife of a local man who is eager for her to bear him a son and heir.

But while misfortunes might muffle her voice for a time, they cannot mute it. And when she realizes that she must stand up not only for herself, but for other girls, for the ones who came before her and were lost, and for the next girls, who will inevitably follow; she finds the resolve to speak, however she can—in a whisper, in song, in broken English—until she is heard.

“Adunni’s brave, fresh voice powerfully articulates a resounding anger toward Africa’s toxic patriarchy. . . . Throughout her harrowing coming-of-age journey, told with verve and compassion, Adunni never loses the ‘louding voice’ that makes Daré’s story, and her protagonist, so unforgettable.”—The New York Times Book Review

How Beautiful We Were
Imbolo Mbue

We should have known the end was near. So begins Imbolo Mbue’s powerful second novel, How Beautiful We Were. Set in the fictional African village of Kosawa, it tells of a people living in fear amid environmental degradation wrought by an American oil company. Pipeline spills have rendered farmlands infertile. Children are dying from drinking toxic water. Promises of cleanup and financial reparations to the villagers are made—and ignored. The country’s government, led by a brazen dictator, exists to serve its own interests. Left with few choices, the people of Kosawa decide to fight back. Their struggle will last for decades and come at a steep price.

Told from the perspective of a generation of children and the family of a girl named Thula who grows up to become a revolutionary, How Beautiful We Were is a masterful exploration of what happens when the reckless drive for profit, coupled with the ghost of colonialism, comes up against one community’s determination to hold on to its ancestral land and a young woman’s willingness to sacrifice everything for the sake of her people’s freedom.

Apeirogon
Colum McCann

Bassam Aramin is Palestinian. Rami Elhanan is Israeli. They inhabit a world of conflict that colors every aspect of their lives, from the roads they are allowed to drive on to the schools their children attend to the checkpoints, both physical and emotional, they must negotiate.

But then their lives are upended one after the other: first, Rami’s 13-year-old daughter becomes the victim of suicide bombers; a decade later, Bassam’s 10-year-old daughter is killed by a rubber bullet. When they learn of each other’s stories, they recognize the loss that connects them. Together they attempt to use their grief as a weapon for peace—and with their one small act, start to permeate what has for generations seemed an impermeable conflict.

This extraordinary novel is the fruit of a seed planted when the novelist Colum McCann met the real Bassam and Rami. With their blessing, and unprecedented access to their families, lives, and personal recollections, McCann began to craft Apeirogon, which uses their real-life stories to begin another—one that crosses centuries and continents, stitching together time, art, history, nature, and politics in a tale both heartbreaking and hopeful.

Lean Against This Late Hour
Garous Abdolmalekian; Translated by Idra Novey and Ahmad Nadalizadeh

The first selection of poems by renowned Iranian poet Garous Abdolmalekian to appear in English, this collection is a mesmerizing, disorienting descent into the trauma of loss and its aftermath. In spare lines, Abdolmalekian conjures surreal, cinematic images that pan wide as deftly as they narrow into intimate focus.

“To put it simply: Garous Abdolmalekian is one of the most talented poets on the world scene today.”—Ilya Kaminsky, author of Deaf Republic

A Long Petal of the Sea
Isabel Allende; Translated by Nick Caistor and Amanda Hopkinson

In the late 1930s, civil war grips Spain and hundreds of thousands are forced to flee, including two refugees who unite in a marriage neither of them desires in order to survive. Together with 2,000 others, they embark on a ship chartered by the poet Pablo Neruda, to Chile: “the long petal of sea and wine and snow.” Destined to witness the battle between freedom and repression as it plays out across the world, Roser and Victor discover and redefine what home means for them in an unstable world.

Sanditon and Other Stories
Jane Austen

In the story of Charlotte Heywood, a new arrival to a small seaside town, Jane Austen contemplated a changing society with a mixture of skepticism and amusement, and notably crafted her only character of color in the mixed-race heiress Miss Lambe. Though unfinished at the time of her death, Sanditon is a key work for readers of Austen. This volume also includes another fragment, The Watsons and Lady Susan, an early, epistolary work.

Difficult Light
Tomás González; Translated by Andrea Rosenberg

Over twenty years after his son’s death, nearly blind and unable to paint, David turns to writing to examine the deep shades of his loss. Despite his acute pain, or perhaps because of it, David observes beauty in the ordinary: in the resemblance of a woman to Egyptian portraits, in the horseshoe crabs that wash up on Coney Island, in the foam gathering behind a ferry propeller. From one of Columbia’s greatest contemporary novelists, Difficult Light is a formally daring meditation on grief, written in candid, arresting prose.

Dorothy Strachey; Introduction by André Aciman

A groundbreaking story of first love, Olivia—based loosely on the author’s own life—was first published in 1949 under a pseudonym. It tells the story of a 16-year-old girl who is sent to a Parisian finishing school. Soon after her arrival, she finds herself falling under the spell of her beautiful and charismatic teacher, Mademoiselle Julie. As they grow closer, their relationship is threatened by jealousy and rivalry, and the school year seems destined to end in tragedy.

Latitudes of Longing
Shubhangi Swarup

Latitudes of Longing sweeps across India, following the interconnected lives of its characters, including a scientist who studies trees and a clairvoyant who speaks to them; a geologist working to end futile wars over a glacier; a yeti who seeks human companionship; and more. A young writer awarded one of the most prestigious prizes in India for this novel, Shubhangi Swarup offers a soaring view of humanity: our beauty and ugliness, our capacity to harm and love one another, and our mysterious and sacred relationship with nature.

Farewell, Ghosts
Nadia Terranova

Ida is a married woman in her late thirties, who lives in Milan and works at a radio station. Her mother wants to renovate the family apartment in Messina, to put it up for sale and asks her daughter to sort through her things. Surrounded by the objects of her past, Ida is forced to deal with the trauma she experienced as a girl, twenty-three years earlier, when her father left one morning, never to return. Farewell, Ghosts is a poetic and intimate novel about what it means to build one’s own identity.

Black Shack Alley
Joseph Zobel; Translation by Keith Q. Warner; Introduction by Keith Q. Warner; Foreword by Patrick Chamouiseau; Translated by Charly Verstraet and Jeffrey Landon Allen

Joseph Zobel’s semi-autobiographical 1950 novel Black Shack Alley chronicles the coming-of-age of José, a young boy grappling with issues of power and identity in colonial Martinique. As José transitions from childhood to young adulthood and from rural plantations to urban Fort-de-France on a quest for upward mobility, he bears witness to and struggles against the various manifestations of white supremacy, both subtle and overt, that will alter the course of his life.

Love After Love
Ingrid Persaud

An electrifying novel of an unconventional family in Trinidad mended by their individual, and collective, quests for love. Love After Love questions who and how we love, the obligations of family, and the consequences of choices made in desperation.

“An unforgettable symphony of love and loss, heartache and guilt, and the secrets and lies that pull us together, and tear us apart. Dazzlingly told in the most electrifying prose you will read all year.”—Marlon James, Booker Prize–winning author of Black Leopard, Red Wolf
